TAP (tap), n. Gentle blow or touch.—Tap day, at Yale University, a day set apart annually, about May 15th or 20th, for election to the Senior societies, "Skull and Bones," "Scroll and Keys," and "Wolf's Head." On this day Juniors are admitted to the Senior privileges of going bareheaded, wearing a moustache, roller-skating, spinning tops and bowling to the President after chapel. In the afternoon the Junior class—now become Seniors—gather around the elm at the north end of the campus, and as five o'clock strikes in the chapel tower, the Senior members of the three societies appear from the Senior dormitory at the south end of the campus, and, in groups of two or three, pace sternly down the walk to the crowd of Juniors. Each Senior selects one man from the crowd, whom he "taps" on the shoulder, saying "Go to your room." The man thus "tapped" goes rapidly to his room, followed by the Senior dressed in black suit, black tie, and black derby. When the pair have reached the door of the Junior's room the Senior leaves the Junior who shortly after returns to the campus alone, where he receives congratulations. If the man "tapped" does not accept the election, he does not go to his room, but remains in the crowd, and the Senior at once "taps" another man.

(tel-a-mō'nēz).] Figure of a man, serving as a column or pilaster. [Gr. telamōn, bearer.]

TELAUTOGRAPH (tel-a'to-grāf), n. Telegraph that reproduces hand-writing or drawing at a distance. See TELEWRITER. [Gr. tēle, at a distance, autos, self, and graphō, write.]

TELE-, prefix. Far; afar; at a distance. [Gr. tēle, far.]

TELECTROGRAPH (tel-ek'tro-grāf), n. Electrical device for transmitting photographs by wire, by means of which photographs of all kinds may be telegraphed for publication at distant points. [TELE-, ELECTRO-, and -GRAPH.]

TELECTROSCOPE (tel-ek'tro-skōp), n. Electrical device for reproducing at a distance visible images of objects located at the transmitting station. [TELE-, ELECTRO-, and -SCOPE.]

TELEDU (tel'e-dō), n. East Indian stinking badger.

TELEGA (tē-lā'ga), n. The common Russian farmer's vehicle, without springs.

TELEGRAM (tel'e-gram), n. Message sent by telegraph. [TELE-, and Gr. gramma, writing—graphō, write.]

TELEGRAPH (tel'e-grāf), n. 1. Any device for communicating intelligence to a distance by means of preconcerted signals. 2. System or apparatus for electrically transmitting signals or messages to a distance. 3. Apparatus used in such method. 4. Telegram.—Wireless telegraph, see TELEGRAPHY. [TELE- and -GRAPH.]

Telegraph Sounder and Key.

TELEGRAPH (tel'e-grāf), v. [pr.p. TEL'EGRAPHING; p.t. and p.p. TELEGRAPHED (tel'e-grāft).] I. vt. Transmit or announce by telegraph. II. vi. Send a message by telegraph.

TELEGRAPHIC (tel-e-graf'ik), a. 1. Of or pertaining to a telegraph; sent by telegraph. 2. Used for telegraphing.

TELEGRAPHIST (tel-eg'rā-flst), n. One skilled in telegraphy.

TELEGRAPHOPHONE (tel-e-graf'o-fōn), n. Apparatus for producing a phonographic record at a distance, or for reproducing its sounds at a distance. [TELEGRAPH and PHONE.]

TELEGRAPH-TYPEWRITER (tel'e-grāf-tip'-rī-tēr), n. Device that reproduces at the receiving station typewritten messages in typewriting.

TELEGRAPHY (tel-eg'rā-fl or tel'e-graf-l), n. Art or practice of communicating intelligence by telegraph; art of constructing or managing telegraphs.—Wireless telegraphy, telegraphic communication by means of electric waves between aerial conductors termed antennæ, usually mounted on towers or masts.

TELEKIN (tel'e-kin), n. Electrical device for controlling machinery from a distance, either by means of an ordinary electric cable or wire or by electric waves impelled through the air without the aid of wires. [TELE-, and Gr. kinēsis, motion.]

TELEKINESIS (tel-e-ki-nē'sis), n. Production of motion in another body without contact. [TELE-, and Gr. kinēsis, motion.]

TELELECTRIC (tel-e-lek'trik), a. Producing mechanical motions or effects at a distance by electrical means. [TELE- and ELECTRIC.]

TELELECTROSCOPE (tel-e-lek'tro-skōp), n. Electric device that reproduces images at the telegraphic receiving station of objects at the transmitting station. [TELE-, ELECTRO- and -SCOPE.]

TELEMACHUS (te-lem'a-kus), n. Greek Legend. Only son of Ulysses and Penelope.

TELEMETER (tel-em'e-tēr), n. 1. Instrument for determining distance, as from the gun to the object fired at. 2. Electrical apparatus for recording at a distance. [TELE- and METER.]

TELEMETRIC (tel-e-met'rik), a. Pertaining to telemetry.

TELEMETRY (tel-em'e-tri), n. Art of using a telemeter.

TELENGISCOPE (tel-en'ji-skōp), n. Instrument which combines the powers of the telescope and microscope. [Gr. tēle, at a distance, engys, near, and skopēō, view.]

TELEOLOGICAL (tel-e-o-loj'ik-əl), a. Pertaining to teleology.

TELEOLOGICALLY (tel-e-o-loj'ik-əl-i), adv. In a teleological manner.

TELEOLOGIST (tel-e-ol'o-jist), n. One versed in teleology; one who investigates the final cause or purpose of phenomena, or the end for which each has been produced.

TELEOLOGY (tel-e-ol'o-ji), n. Science or doctrine of final causes; doctrine that everything was created for, and adapted to, a purpose. [Gr. telos, purpose, and logos, doctrine.]

TELEOPHYTE (tel'e-o-fit), n. Plant whose cells are arranged in tissues, as a tree. [Gr. teleios, complete, and phyton, plant.]

TELESCOPE (tel'e-o-skōp), n. Electrical device for vision at a distance. [TELE- and -SCOPE.]

TELEOST (tel'e-ost), a. Having a skeleton of well-developed bones, as ordinary fishes. [Gr. teleios, complete, and osteon, bone.]

TELEPATHIC (tel-e-path'ik), a. Pertaining to telepathy.

TELEPATHIST (tel-ep'a-thist), n. One who practices telepathy.

TELEPATHIZE (tel-ep'a-thiz), v. [pr.p. TEL-EP'ATHIZING; p.t. and p.p. TELEPATHIZED (tel-ep'a-thizd).] I. vt. Affect the mind of at a distance by means of mental suggestion, or telepathy. II. vi. Practice telepathy.

TELEPATHY (tel-ep'a-thl), n. Transference of mental impressions without material agency. [TELE- and -PATHY.]

TELEPHONE (tel'e-fōn), n. Instrument transmitting sound, especially of the voice, by means of electricity. In a device termed the "transmitter" a thin sheet of metal is set in vibration by the sounds sought to be transmitted, which causes rapid alternations of strength in a current of electricity passing through a wire to a connected distant telephone, where another thin metallic plate contained in a device termed the receiver is set in symphonic vibration, thus reproducing the sounds in the listener's ear.

Telephone receiver (in section) and transmitter.

—Wireless telephone, telephone for transmitting speech or sound without the aid of wire, now successfully operated over distances of five miles and used in the U. S. navy. See TELEPHONY.—Wireless submarine telephone, device for signaling under the sea by means of which persons on ships many miles apart may converse with one another. In communicating from shore a large bell sunk 30 feet in the sea rings out the signals in response to pressure on the keys of an apparatus stationed above, with which its hammer is electrically connected. A special receiving and annunciating apparatus is used on the ships by means of which a bell 12 miles distant can not only be heard but echoed on a large gong in the pilot house. [TELE- and PHONE.]

TELEPHONE (tel'e-fōn), v. [pr.p. TEL'EPHONING; p.t. and p.p. TELEPHONED (tel'e-fōnd).] I. vt. Send, reproduce, or communicate with, by means of a telephone. II. vi. Send a message by means of a telephone; talk through a telephone.

TELEPHONE-METER (tel'e-fōn-mē-tēr), n. Device for automatically recording in a telephone exchange the number of completed connections made for a given instrument. The meters in service do not record length of communications.

Telephone-meter.

TELEPHONIC (tel-e-fon'ik), a. 1. Of or pertaining to a telephone. 2. Transmitted by telephone. 3. Of the nature of a telephone.

TELEPHONIST (tel'e-fō-nist), n.

1. One who operates a telephone. 2. One skilled in telephony.

TELEPHONOGRAM (tel-e-fō'no-gram), n. Telephonic message. [TELEPHONE and -GRAM.]

TELEPHONOGRAPH (tel-e-fō'no-gráf), n. 1. Instrument for receiving and recording a telephonic message. 2. Same as TELEGRAPHOPHONE. [TELEPHONE and -GRAPH.]

TELEPHONY (tel-ef'o-ni or tel'e-fō-ni), n. Art or practice of transmitting or reproducing sounds or communications by means of the telephone.—Wireless telephony, telephonic communication by means of electric waves between aerial conductors, termed antennæ, mounted on masts or towers.—Wireless submarine telephony, see TELEPHONE.

TELEPHOTE (tel'e-fôt), n. Instrument for transmitting to a distance images of objects by telegraph, selenium being utilized for the purpose.

Telephote.

The cut shows improved telephote invented by Prof. Rosing, of the Technical Institute of St. Petersburg. The sending station is shown at the left, the receiving station at the right. [TELE-, and Gr. phôs, phôtos, light.]

TELEPHOTOGRAPHY (tel-e-fô-tog'ra-fi), n. Telegraphic transmission of photographic or other pictures by means of changes produced in the electric current by the action of light upon selenium.

TELERITIS (tel-ēr-i'tis), n. New form of nervous debility resulting from strain on nervous system of switchboard operators in telephone exchanges. [Coined word, TELE- and -ITIS.]

TELESCOPE (tel'e-sköp), n. 1. Optical instrument which makes distant objects appear nearer and larger.—Reflecting telescope, telescope in which the image is formed by one or two concave mirrors, a large one at the lower end and a small one at the upper end.—Refracting telescope, telescope in which the image is formed by refraction Largest German Telescope, built at Treptow, Germany, in 1910.

in an object-glass, and is magnified by an eyeglass. 2. Valse composed of two cases, one fitting into the other, the two being fastened together by straps. [Gr. teleskopos, far-seeing —tele, far off, and skopeô, see.]

TELESCOPE (tel'e-sköp), v. [pr.p. TEL'ESCOPIING; p.t. and p.p. TELESCOPED (tel'e-sköpt).] I. vt. Drive together in the manner of the joints of a small telescope or spy-glass, as two colliding railroad cars, etc. II. vi. Be driven together in such a manner that one enters the other, as colliding cars.

TELESCOPIC (tel-e-skop'ik), a. 1. Pertaining to, performed by, or like, a telescope. 2. Seen only by means of a telescope. 3. Having the power of extension by means of joints sliding within or over one another, like the tube of a pocket telescope or spy-glass. 4. Seen or discoverable only by the help of a telescope.

TELESCOPICALLY (tel-e-skop'ik-al-l), adv. 1. By means of a telescope. 2. In manner of a telescope.

TELESCOPY (tel'e-skō-pl or tel-es'ko-pl), n. Art or science of constructing or using the telescope.

TELESEME (tel'e-sēm), n. Electric annunciator for use in hotels, etc. [TELE-, and Gr. sēma, sign.]

TELESPECTROSCOPE (tel-e-spek'tro-sköp), n. An astronomical telescope with a spectroscope attached. [TELE- and SPECTROSCOPE.]

TELETHERMOMETER (tel-e-thēr-mom'e-tēr), n. Electric device for indicating and recording temperature at a distance. [TELE- and THERMOMETER.]

TELEWRITER (tel'e-ri-tēr), n. Telegraphic device which enables persons to send facsimile written messages by wire, an electric pen at the receiving station duplicating the message in the handwriting of the person who wrote it. The device was first used in London, England, in 1910. [TELE- and WRITER.]

TELL (tel), v. [pr.p. TELL'ING; p.t. and p.p. TOLD (töld).] I. vt. 1. Number; count. 2. Utter; narrate. 3. Disclose. 4. Discern. 5. Explain. 6. Inform. 7. Order; bid. 8. Assure. II. vi. 1. Talk; blab. 2. Produce, or take, effect. [A. S. tellan. Cf. Ger. zahlen.]

TELL-CLOCK (tel'klok), n. One who sits and counts the hours; idler.

It adopted certain rules of international arbitration and established a permanent court of arbitration; (2) a similar conference proposed by the President of the United States, and at the invitation of the Czar of Russia, held at The Hague June 15-Oct. 18, 1907.

Peace Palace, The, a building in the wooded park at The Hague, to be occupied by the permanent International Arbitration Court. For the construction of this "Palace of Peace," Andrew Carnegie gave to the government of the Netherlands the sum of $1,500,000. Its corner stone was laid July 30, 1907.

Passion Play, in the year 1634 the village of Ober-Ammergau, Bavaria, was devastated by a pestilence, and in their extremity the survivors vowed to perform every tenth year the Passion of Christ, if they should be spared—a vow which has ever since been observed regularly. The town is situated in the valley of the Aumer, forty-six miles southwest of Munich, and the inhabitants, who number about fifteen hundred, are chiefly engaged in the carrying of wood. The performance lasts for twelve consecutive Sundays during the summer season, occurring every tenth year.

Path Finder, The, a nickname given to John Charles Fremont, who conducted four expeditions across the Rocky Mountains in the days prior to the trans-continental railroads.

Petrified Forests, forests in the Yellowstone region, Grand Canyon, and elsewhere, whose trees have been changed into agate and other kinds of stone, the wood having been removed cell by cell and mineral matter held in solution substituted in its place—every knot and every cell being copied in stone with absolute accuracy. The petrified hollow logs in these forests are often found filled with beautiful crystals of quartz and amethyst.

Philosopher's Stone, The, a substance for which the alchemists were always searching. It was to be used to turn silver and other metals into gold.

Phonograph, The, invented by Thomas A. Edison, in 1889.

Returning Board, a board formed to receive, canvass, and revise election returns. They were created in some of the reconstructed States soon after the civil war for the purpose of rectifying fraud or violence that might be practiced on the negroes at the polls. In Louisiana, in 1876, the State returning board became noted for the manner in which it "counted out" Tilden and Hendricks.

Robbing Peter to Pay Paul, the origin of this phrase is as follows: On Dec. 17, 1540, the Abbey Church of St. Peter, Westminster, London, was by royal patent advanced to the dignity of a cathedral; ten years later, however, it was joined to the diocese of London, and much of its property appropriated to the repairs of St. Paul's Cathedral. Hence it was said by a contemporaneous writer that "it was not meet to rob St. Peter's altar in order to build one to St. Paul."

Roland for an Oliver, A, a phrase equivalent to "tit for tat." Roland and Oliver, two of Charlemagne's most famous knights, fought five days without either of them gaining the slightest advantage; hence the saying.

Rubicon, To Pass the, to take an irretrievable step. The Rubicon river separated Italy from Cisalpine Gaul, Cæsar's province. When he crossed that river he became an enemy of the Republic.

Rump Parliament, The, what was left of the British Parliament in 1648, after Cromwell had imprisoned and driven out the others for refusing to condemn Charles I.

Sabbatarians, a term applied to such Christians as observe the seventh day of the week, as others do the first. They maintain that the seventh day of the week is of divine institution, and that Christians had no authority for changing it to the first. Some of the Baptists hold this view.

Sabbath Day's Journey, according to the Rabbins a Sabbath day's journey was 2000 cubits, or about 1,350 yards. The Mosaic law does not precisely define it.

Sacred War, a war about sacred places or about religion. Four sacred wars were waged in Greece (B. C. 595-338) chiefly for the defense of the temple of Delphi and the sacred territory surrounding it. A Mohammedan war for the faith is called a Jihad. The Crusades and the wars of the Reformation were sacred wars. The quarrel which led to the Crimean war was at first a dispute between Russia and France about sacred spots at Jerusalem. When Russia fights, she uniformly gives out that it is a holy war; and after the destruction of the Turkish fleet at Sinope (Nov. 30, 1853), it was officially or semi-officially intimated that "the most pious Czar thanks the Lord of Lords for the success of the victorious Russian arms which triumphed in the sacred combat for the orthodox faith."

Safety Lamp, invented by Sir Humphry Davy, English chemist, in 1816.

Saga, an ancient Scandinavian tale, legend, or tradition, of considerable length and relating either historical or mythical events; a tale, a history, a story, a legend. The Scandinavian sagas were compiled chiefly in the twelfth and three following centuries. The most remarkable are those of Lodbrok, Hervara, Vilkina, Völsunga, Blomsturvalla, Ynglinga, Olaf Tryggva-Sonar, with those of Joms-vikingia and of Knytlinga (which contain the legendary history of Iceland), the Heims-Kringla and New Edda, due to Snorri Sturluson.

Sage Foundation, the sum of $10,000,000 to be devoted to the improvement of the social and living conditions in the United States, set aside by Mrs. Russell Sage, of New York, March 12, 1907. The means to effect the object of the gift will include the establishment and maintenance of charitable and beneficial activities, agencies, and institutions and the aid of any such activities, agencies and institutions already established.

Salian Hymns, hymns which were sung at the annual festival by the Salli or priests in honor of Mars and other deities, and distinguished men. They were accompanied by warlike dances, clashing of shields, etc.

Salt River, an imaginary stream up which a defeated candidate is supposed to be sent, and whence he is not expected to come back.

Salvation Army, The, a religious body organized on military principles, with a view of reaching the non-churchgoers of the world. It was first started as a Christian Mission in July 1865, by Rev. Wm. Booth in East London. On Christmas, 1878, it received the name of the Salvation Army, and its growth throughout the world has been steadily increasing.

San Francisco Earthquake and Fire, devastated San Francisco, Cal., April 18-19, 1906.

Sans Culottes (Fr., without breeches), was a term first applied in derision by the aristocrats to the popular party in France at the beginning of the Revolution of 1789; and as in several cases of a like kind, it came afterwards to be regarded by them as a title of honor. In the republican calendar, the five supernumerary days (each month having only 30 days, and therefore making 360 in the twelve) were at first called jours sans-culottides.

Schoolmaster Abroad, a phrase first used by Lord Brougham in a speech in Parliament as follows: "Let the soldier be abroad if he will; he can do nothing in this age. There is another personage abroad, a person less imposing—in the eyes of some, perhaps, insignificant. The schoolmaster is abroad! and I trust to him, armed with his primer, against the soldier in full military array."

Sepoy Mutiny, the mutiny in India, May 10, 1857, attended by a massacre of Europeans.

Seven Dials, a district of London inhabited by the poorer and criminal classes.

Seven Hilled City, The, Rome, because it was built on seven hills — Capitoline, Palatine, Aventine, Quirinal, Viminal, Esquiline, and Cælian.

Seven Sages of Greece, The, Rias, Chilo, Cleobulus, Periander, Pittacus, Solon, and Thales.

Seven Sleepers of Ephesus, The, seven youths who, according to the legend, took refuge in a cave during the persecution of Christians (249-251) by the Roman Emperor, Decius, and awoke about 230 years after to find Christianity established throughout the Empire.

Seventh Heaven, supreme happiness. The cabalists maintained that there are seven heavens, each rising in happiness above the other, the seventh being the abode of God and the highest class of angels.

Seven Wonders of the World, among the Greeks in ancient times the seven wonders of the world were reckoned to be the Pyramids of Egypt, the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, the Colossus at Rhodes, the Mausoleum at Halicarnassus, the statue of Zeus, by Phidias, at Olympia, and the Pharos of Alexandria in Egypt.

Sherman Anti-Trust Law, same as Anti-Trust Act, which see.

Ship of the Desert, The, a nickname for a camel, said to have had its origin in George Sandys' "Paraphrase of the Book of Job," 1610. It occurs in the couplet:

"Three thousand camels his rank pastures fed, Arabia's wanderingships, for traffic bred."

Short Hairs, a cant name applied politically and socially to the masses of working people as distinguished from the wealthier classes, or "silk stockings."

Sick Man, The, Turkey. The phrase originated with the Czar Nicholas I. of Russia, who in a conversation with the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg, Jan. 15, 1854, intimated his opinion that Turkey was sick and dying. He therefore proposed that to avoid a European war when the demise took place, Russia and Great Britain should come at once to a private arrangement as to the disposal of the Sick Man's effects. The British government rejected the proposal, intimated its belief in the recovery of the Sick Man, and soon after fought by his side in the Crimean war.

Silk Stockings, a name given, socially and politically, to the classes of individuals in our large cities who affect patrician proclivities, in contradistinction to the laboring classes, or "short hairs."

Single Tax, the principle held by Henry George and his followers, that the value which the growth and improvement of the community attaches to land should be taken for the use of the community, so that no tax need be levied on the product of labor, but all public revenues for National,

State, county and municipal purposes could be raised by a single tax upon land values, irrespective of improvements.

Sirian Stars, stars having spectra similar to that of Sirius. Their light is of a white or bluish cast, and is more intense than that of the solar stars, whose light is yellow. Two-thirds of the Sirian stars are in the Milky Way.

Social War, a name given to the war (B. C. 91) between the Romans and those of the Italian tribes who were specifically termed the allies (Socii) of the Roman State, in which the latter fought for admission to the rights and privileges of Roman citizenship, an object which they ultimately obtained.

Sophists, (Gr. sophistes, from sophia, wisdom), was the name given to a class of philosophers who arose in ancient Greece about the 5th century B. C. They went about discoursing and debating, and taught for hire the youth of rich and noble families. Hence they came to be regarded as pursuing philosophy more for the sake of gain than from any proper love of it. They cultivated the various arts of persuasion, and in their attacks upon each other, laboring to expose and lay bare the delusions of appearance, they acquired great dexterity in the use of terms, and frequently attempted to secure victory by the use of specious fallacies.

South Sea Bubble, The, a disastrous financial speculation which originated in England with the directors of a joint stock company, which, in consideration of certain exclusive privileges of trading to the South Seas, offered the government easier terms for the advance of the negotiations of loans than could be obtained from the general public. In 1720 the proposal of the company to take over the entire national debt in consideration of receiving annually 5 per cent, was accepted. Professing to possess extensive sources of revenue, the directors held out promises to the public of paying as much as 60 per cent on their shares. It soon became apparent that such magnificent promises could never be fulfilled, and in a few months' time the collapse came which ruined thousands.

Stalwarts, a name applied to members of the Republican party in the United States who firmly adhere to the principles, methods and rules of the party. Also called "machine" and "regular" Republicans.

Star Chamber, Court of the (Lat. camera stellata), was a tribunal which figures largely in certain parts of English history. It is said to derive its name from the room in which it sat, the old council chamber of the palace of Westminster, because the roof was at first garnished with gilded stars. This court was of very ancient origin, and was remodeled by 3 Hen. VII. c. 1, and 21 Hen. VIII. c. 20. It was under the direction of the chancellor, and consisted of divers lords, spiritual and temporal, being privy councillors, with two judges of the courts of common law. It had jurisdiction in cases of forgery, perjury, riot, conspiracy, fraud, libel; but its power came afterwards to be much extended, so as to render it a most odious and unjust instrument in the hands of a despotic administration. Its process was summary and often iniquitous, and the punishment which it inflicted often arbitrary and cruel. It became particularly odious in the reign of Charles I., and was at length abolished by 16 Car. I. c. 10, to the great joy of the people.

Starved Rock, an almost circular rock rising 125 feet above the Illinois River, about ten miles west of Ottawa, in La Salle Co., Illinois. Here the remnants of the once mighty confederacy of the Illini tribes made their last stand against their Indian foes and were wiped out almost to a man. In 1911 this natural monument became the property of the State of Illinois, and will form the nucleus of a State park.

Steamboats, first proved practically useful by Robert Fulton, in 1807.

Steam Engines, idea of a separate condenser for, patented by James Watt, English civil engineer, in January, 1769.

Stoics, is the name of a philosophical sect of ancient Greece, so called from stoa, a porch in Athens, where the founder of the sect, Zeno, expounded his doctrines (B. C. 300). Alarmed at the skepticism which seemed inevitably following speculations of a metaphysical kind, Zeno, like Epicurus, fixed his thoughts principally upon morals. His philosophy boasted of being eminently practical, and connected with the daily duties of life. The aim of man's existence is to be virtuous, and virtue consists not in a life of contemplation but of action.

Stonewall Jackson, a sobriquet of Gen. Thomas J. Jackson, a famous Confederate general, having its origin in a remark made by another Confederate general to encourage his own men: "Look at Jackson's men! they stand like a stone wall!"

Strand, The, a famous London street, leading from Charing Cross to Fleet street.

Strasburg Cathedral, one of the noblest works of Gothic architecture, 468 feet high, and containing a wonderful clock.

Sucker State, a nickname for the state of Illinois.

Survival of the Fittest, a phrase introduced by Herbert Spencer to signify what Darwin called Natural Selection. "The preservation during the battle for life of varieties which possess any advantage in structure, constitution, or instinct, I have called Natural Selection; and Mr. Herbert Spencer had well expressed the same idea by the Survival of the Fittest."—Darwin: Variation of Animals and Plants, i. 6.

Swedish Nightingale, The, a sobriquet of Jenny Lind (Mme. Goldschmidt), famous Swedish singer.

Taj Mahal, a mausoleum erected at Agra, a city which is now the seat of the government of the North-western provinces of Bengal, by the emperor Shah Jehan, to commemorate the virtues of his favorite consort, whose original name was Arjammed Banoo, which, according to oriental usage, was changed on her elevation to that of Mumtazee Yumanee, signifying the paragon of the age. The Taj Mahal, of white marble, with four tall minarets of the same material rising at each of its angles, is placed on an elevated terrace, also of white and yellow marble. The interior, consisting of a central hall, in which are the tombs of the emperor and his queen, is remarkable for its exquisite finish, the pavement being laid with alternate squares of marble, and the walls, screens, and tombs crowned with flowers and inscriptions, executed in beautiful mosaic of cornelian, lapis lazuli, and jasper, the whole appearing as fresh and almost as perfect as when completed. The Taj is surrounded by a lofty wall of red stone, with cupolas and pillars of marble.

Tammany Hall, a section of the Democratic party in New York City; also the name of the building in which they meet.

Tammany Ring, a name sometimes applied in condemnation to the Tammany Society of New York, a political organization in sympathy with the Democratic Party.

Telegraph, Electric, invented by Morse, in 1835.

Telephone, invented by Alexander Graham Bell, American physicist, in 1876.

Templars, Knights Templars, or Knights of the Temple, were a religious order of knights founded in the beginning of the 12th century, for the defense of the holy sepulcher and the protection of Christian pilgrims. They were established in Jerusalem by Baldwin II., who gave them a part of his palace, and their rule was confirmed by Honorius II. in 1128. The order soon became very distinguished, and numbers sought to join it from the chief families of all parts of Christendom. Legacies and donations in lands and of money were also showered upon it. After the overthrow of the kingdom of Jerusalem, about 1186, they spread themselves over Germany and other countries of Europe, to which they were invited by the liberality of the Christians. They continued to flourish for a time, and acquired great wealth and military renown; but their vices at the same time multiplied, and at length their arrogance, luxury, and cruelty increased to such a length that their privileges were revoked, and their order suppressed with the most terrible circumstances of severity and cruelty. Their destroyer was Philip IV. of France, who came to the throne in 1285, at the age of seventeen.

Teutonic Order, a military religious order of knights, established toward the close of the twelfth century, in imitation of the Templars. It was composed chiefly of Teutonic Crusaders, and was established in the Holy Land for charitable purposes. It gradually attained to high power, but began to decline in the fifteenth century, and was finally abolished by Napoleon in 1809.

Theosophical Society, a society founded at New York in 1875 by Col. Olcott. Its objects are: (1) To form the nucleus of a Universal Brotherhood of Humanity, without distinction of race, creed or color; (2) to promote the study of Aryan and other eastern literature, religions, and sciences; (3) to investigate unexplained laws of Nature and the physical powers of man. The society has several branches in Europe and in India.

Thirty Tyrants, thirty magistrates appointed by Sparta over Athens at the termination of the Peloponnesian war. Their reign of terrorism was overthrown by Thrasybulus in 403 B. C.

Thirty Years' War, in Germany, was a memorable struggle which was carried on between 1618 and 1648. Its origin is to be traced to the changes which resulted from the Reformation, and was conducted between the emperor and Roman Catholic states of Germany, and the Protestant states with their allies, Denmark, and afterwards Sweden and France. It is renowned for the victories of Wallenstein and Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden and was terminated by the Peace of Westphalia.

Three Estates of the Realm, the nobility, the clergy, and the commonalty, represented in the two houses of the English Parliament.

Three Kings, The, name given in the Roman Church to the Magi, who came from the East to adore the Infant Jesus (Matt. ii. 1-12). They are probably called kings from Psalm lxxii. 10, which verse is used as an antiphon in the office for Epiphany. According to tradition, their names were Gaspar, Melchior, and Balthazar, and on their return to the East they received baptism. The Empress Helena is said to have brought their bones to Constantinople, whence they were removed to Milan, and afterward to Cologne. The Chapel of the Three Kings built by the Emperor Maximilian (1459-1519), in Cologne Cathedral, is supposed to contain their relics.

Three Times Three, a wonder is said to last three times three days. The scourge used for criminals is a "cat o' nine tails." Possession is nine points of the law, being equal to (1) money to make good a claim, (2) patience to carry a suit through, (3) a good cause, (4) a good lawyer, (5) a good counsel, (6) good witnesses, (7) a good jury, (8) a good judge, (9) good luck. Leases used to be granted for 999 years. Ordeals by fire consisted of three times three red-hot plowshares. There are three times three crowns recognized in heraldry, and three times three marks of cadency. We show honor by a three times three in drinking a health. The worthies are three Jews, three pagans and three Christians; viz.: Joshua, David and Judas Maccabæus; Hector, Alexander, and Julius Cæsar; Arthur, Charlemagne, and Godfrey of Bouillon. It is by nines that Eastern presents are given, when the Orientals would extend their magnificence to the highest degree. The Etruscans of old believed in the omnipotence of nine gods, viz.: Juno, Minerva, and Tinia (the three chief). The other six were Vulcan, Mars, Saturn, Hercules, Summanus and Vedio.

Thundering Legion, a Roman legion containing some Christians which (A.D. 174) fought under Marcus Antoninus against the Marcomanni. The Roman army was shut up in a defile and ready to perish with thirst, when a thunderstorm with heavy rain relieved them of their distress, and so terrified the enemy that a complete victory was gained. The Christians attributed the deliverance to the prayer which they had just before presented, and considered it miraculous. The heathens also considered the interposition supernatural, but ascribed it to Jupiter, Mercury, or to the power of magic.

Titan-like, after the fashion of the Titans, who piled mountain on mountain in order to reach heaven in their war against Saturn.—

"They were gigantic minds, and their steep aim

Was Titan-like, on daring doubts to pile

Thoughts which should call down thunder, and the flame."

Byron: Childe Harold, iii. 105.

Tommy Atkins, a sobriquet for the British soldier.

Trade Dollar, a silver dollar containing 378 troy grains of silver and 42 troy grains of alloy. Dollars of this description, issued under act of Congress of February 12, 1873, were legal tender to amount of $5. Those issued under act of July 22, 1876, possessed no legal tender power. The trade dollars were intended for trade with countries doing business on a silver basis; hence the name.

Transfiguration, The, the most famous of Raphaels' paintings, now in the Vatican. It represents the miraculous change of Christ on the mount.

Trojan War, the ten years' siege of Troy by the allied Greeks under Agamemnon. It was caused by the abduction of Helen by Paris.

Tweedledum, a word used only in the phrase, "the distinction between tweedledum and tweedledee." The suggestion is that the only difference between the two is in sound—a distinction without a difference. The expression arose in the eighteenth century, when there was a dispute between the admirers of Bononcini and those of Handel, as to the respective merits of those musicians. Among the first were the Duke of Marlborough and most of the nobility; among the latter the Prince of Wales, Pope, and Arbuthnot.

"Some say, compared to Bononcini,

That Mynheer Handel's but a ninny;

Others aver that he to Handel Is scarcely fit to hold a candle.

Strange all this difference should be

'Twixt tweedledum and tweedle-dee." J. Byrom.

Tyburn, the place of execution for criminals convicted in the county of Middlesex, England, down to Nov. 7, 1783, when it was transferred to Newgate, at which the first execution took place on Dec. 9 in the same year. The name Tyburnia was given, about the middle of the nineteenth century, to the district lying between Edgeware Road and Westbourne and Gloucester Terraces and Craven Hill, and bounded on the south by the Bayswater Road, but it soon fell into disuse.

"The name is derived from a brook called Tyburn which flowed down from Hampstead into the Thames."—R. Chambers: Book of Essays, ii. 537.

Typographical Union, a society of compositors banded together for mutual protection, for the regulation of wages, fixing the number of apprentices allowed to each establishment, the length of time each apprentice must serve in order to become a master workman, and for extending general aid to the members of such association.

Uncle Sam, the United States government. So called from the initials U. S., for United States.

Underground Railroad, a phrase used to express the various methods by which fugitive slaves from the Southern states were aided in escaping to the North, or to British territory during the anti-slavery agitation.

University Extension, the name given to a scheme inaugurated in England by which many of the advantages of university teaching are brought within the reach of the inhabitants of other than university towns. Called also Local Lectures Scheme.

University of London, was created by royal charter of William IV. in 1836, confirmed by a new charter granted by Victoria in 1837. A supplementary charter was granted to it in 1849; and in 1856 a new charter revoked the previous ones, and established it on a more definite and extended basis. Its object was to encourage a regular and liberal course of education, by presenting the means to all classes and denominations of her majesty's subjects, without any distinction whatever, by offering to persons who prosecute or complete their studies in the metropolis or other parts of the kingdom, such facilities, and conferring upon them such distinctions, as may incline them to persevere in their laudable pursuits; and for the purpose of ascertaining by examination the persons who have acquired proficiency in literature, science, and art, by the pursuit of such course of education, and of rewarding them by academical degrees as evidence of their respective attainments, and marks of honor proportioned thereunto. It is, in fact, a great literary incorporation legalized for the purpose of testing the qualifications of young men who present themselves as candidates for literary or scientific honors, and of conferring the same on those found possessed of the necessary qualifications, irrespective of where or how acquired. It thus differs from the other universities, which only confer degrees on those who have been educated within their walls.

Urim and Thummim (Heb., light and perfection), among the ancient Jews were the means by which Jehovah vouchsafed to communicate his mind and will to the high priests. What these were is much disputed among critics. The most common opinion, however, is that they were precious stones on the high priest's breastplate, which revealed the will of God by appearing of unusual lustre when favorable, and dim when unfavorable.

Upper Ten Thousand, the aristocracy. A phrase first used by N. P. Willis, in referring to the exclusive fashionable society of New York City.

Vaccination, introduced by Edward Jenner, an English physician, in 1796.

Vade-mecum (Lat., go with me), was first chosen as the title of an ascetic work published at Cologne, 1790, entitled "Vade-mecum piorum Christianorum." It is now not unfrequently applied to manuals or handbooks on scientific subjects, or works of entertainment. It is also used to denote a favorite author whom a person constantly carries with him.

Valentine Day, is the 14th of February, and sacred to St. Valentine, who, according to the legend, was put to death at Rome under the emperor Claudius. The custom of sending valentines on this day is very ancient, but there is no circumstance, so far as is known, in the life of the saint from which it could have originated. There is, however, a very old notion that "birds choose their mates and couple on this day."

Vanity Fair, a fair described by Bunyan (Pilgrim's Progress, pt. i.) as established by Beëlzebub, Apollyon, and Legion, for the sale of all sorts of vanities. (Used to symbolize a collection of the most alluring temptations of the world.)

Varronian Era, M. Terentius Varro, a celebrated Roman author, born B. C. 116, in a work entitled "Antiquitatum Libri," made the legends regarding the arrival of Æneas in Italy serve as an introduction to the early history and chronology of Rome, and by means of them determined the era for the foundation of that city (B. C. 753). This era usually passes by his name, and is called the Varronian Era.

Vatican, the palace of the Popes, on the bank of the Tiber, Rome.

Veda, a body of religious writings which the Hindus believe to be divinely inspired.

Vegetarian Society, a society consisting of members, associates, and subscribers, formed at Manchester, England, in 1847, since extended to other countries, to promote the use of cereals, pulse, and fruit as articles of diet; and to induce habits of abstinence from fish, flesh, and fowl as food. Members are pledged to adopt the vegetarian diet, associates simply agreeing to promote the objects of the society.

Venus de' Medici, a celebrated Greek statue at Florence, attributed to Cleomenes, a sculptor of the 2nd century, B. C.

Venus of Milo, considered the most beautiful of Greek statues. It was found in the Island of Melos in 1820 and is now in the Louvre.

Vitascope, invented by Thos. A. Edison in 1893.

Voltaic Arc, The, discovered by Sir Humphry Davy, in 1809, who first exhibited it in 1813 at the Royal Institution, London, employing for the purpose a voltaic battery of 2000 cells.

Volunteers of America, The, a philanthropic, social, and religious organization founded by Mr. and Mrs. Ballington Booth, in March, 1896, who separated from the Salvation Army.

Wallace Collection, The, famous French paintings of the eighteenth century and other works of art at Hertford House, London, presented to the British nation by the will of Lady Wallace, who died in 1897.

Wall Street, the great financial street of New York. Most of the bankers and brokers are on this street or in its vicinity.

Wandering Jew, The, an imaginary personage, who owes his existence to a legend connected with the history of Christ's passion. As the Savior was carrying his cross to Calvary, he stopped to rest before the house of a Jew, who called out, "Away with you, you shall not rest here." Jesus calmly replied: "Thou shalt wander on the earth till I return." He is said to have wandered ever since, unable to find a grave.

Washington Monument, a magnificent monument erected by the American people, in honor of George Washington. It stands in the Mall, a public park on the banks of the Potomac and Tiber Creek, Washington City. The corner-stone was laid by President Polk, July 4, 1848, and December 6, 1884, the cap-stone was set in position. The foundations are 126½ feet square and 36 feet 8 inches deep. The base of the monument is 55 feet 1½ inches square, and the walls 15 feet ¼ inch thick. At the 500 foot mark, where the pyramidal top begins, the shaft is 34 feet 5½ inches square and the walls are 18 inches thick. The monument is made of blocks of marble two feet thick, and it is said there are over 18,000 of them. The height above the ground is 555 feet. The pyramidal top terminates in an aluminum tip, which is 9 inches high and weighs 100 ounces. The Cologne Cathedral is 525 feet high; the pyramid of Cheops, 486; Strasburg Cathedral, 474; St. Peter's, at Rome, 448; the capitol at Washington, 306, and Bunker Hill monument, 221 feet. The Washington monument is the highest monument in the world; total cost $1,500,000.

Western Empire, the western portion of the Roman Empire, having Rome as its capital as distinguished from the Eastern, with its capital at Constantinople. The Roman Empire was thus divided by the Emperor Theodosius the Great between his two sons Honorius and Arcadius, in 395 A. D.

Western Reserve, the name applied to a tract of country preserved by the state of Connecticut at the time of the cession of the northwest territory to the General Government, in 1800. From the sale to settlers, in small lots, of the land thus reserved the state derived its school fund. The tract consisted of nearly four millions of acres, and now forms a portion of the state of Ohio.

Westminster Abbey, the celebrated abbey-church of London, where many of the illustrious dead of England are buried.

West Point, the name of a post town situated on the Hudson river in Orange Co., New York. The United States Military Academy is located here.

West-Pointer, An officer of the United States army who has been graduated from the West Point military school; a student of the West Point Academy.

Whispering Gallery, a gallery of an elliptical or circular form, in which faint sounds conveyed around the interior wall may be readily heard, while the same are inaudible elsewhere in the interior. Thus in an elliptical chamber, if a person standing in one of the foci speak in a whisper, he will be heard distinctly by a person standing in the other focus, although the same sound would not be audible at the same distance under any other circumstances or at any other place in the chamber. There is a Whispering Gallery in the capitol at Washington, one at St. Paul's Cathedral, London, and another at Gloucester Cathedral, England.

Whistling-Buoy, a sea buoy having a device attached which produces a whistling sound when agitated by the waves.

White Brethren, a body of enthusiasts who appeared in Italy at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and, under the leadership of a priest claiming to be Elias, declared a crusade against the Turks in order to obtain possession of the Holy Land. They were met at Viterbo, by the Papal troops, and were dispersed. Their leader was carried to Rome, where he was burnt as a heretic in 1403.

White Caps, a vigilance organization which operated in some of the Western states in 1886-1889.

White Chapel, a noted parish of London, containing the London Hospital and the Tower of London.

White Elephant, something one doesn't know what to do with. It is said that when the King of Siam desires to ruin a courtier, he makes him a present of a white elephant.

White Friars, a popular English name in pre-Reformation times for the friars of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, now generally known as Carmelites. The name had reference to the fact that they wore over the brown habit a white scapular and cloak.

White House, the residence of the President of the United States, at Washington. So called from its color.

White in the Eye, it is said that the devil has no white in his eye, and hence the French locution, "Celui qui n'a point de blanc en l'œil." "Do you see any white in my eye?" is asked by one who means to insinuate he is no fool or no knave—that is, he is not like the devil with no white in the eye.

White League, a secret political organization formed in New Orleans in 1874, for the overthrow of negro and carpet-bag ascendancy. It has been a powerful factor in Louisiana politics.

Wide Awakes, marching clubs organized for the purpose of aiding in the election of Abraham Lincoln, in the presidential campaign of 1860.

Wild-geese Chase, a hunt after a mare's nest. This chase has two defects: First, it is very hard to catch the goose; and, secondly, it is of very little worth when it is caught. To lead one a wild-geese chase: To beguile one with false hopes, or put one on the pursuit of something not practicable, or at any rate not worth the chase.

Windsor Castle, famous royal castle and residence near London.

Wireless Telegraphy, invented by Guglielmo Marconi, in 1897.

Wire-puller, one who pulls the wires, as of a puppet; one who operates by secret means; one who, being himself behind the scenes and unknown, exercises a powerful influence, especially in political affairs; an intriguer.

Wise Men of the East, The, the three Magi who were guided by the star of Bethlehem to the Savior's birth-place.

Wooden Horse of Troy, Vergil tells us that Ulysses had a monster wooden horse made after the death of Hector, and gave out that it was an offering to the gods to secure a prosperous voyage back to Greece. The Trojans dragged the horse within their city, but it was full of Grecian soldiers, who at night stole out of their place of concealment, slew the Trojan guards, opened the city gates, and set fire to Troy. Menelaos was one of the Greeks shut up in it. It was made by Epeios (Latin, Epeus).

Wooden Spoon, the last of the honor men—i.e. of the Junior Optimes, in the Cambridge University. Sometimes two or more "last" men are bracketed together, in which case the group is termed the spoon bracket. It is said that these men are so called because in days of yore they were presented with a wooden spoon, while the other honor men had a silver or golden one, a spoon being the usual prix de mérite instead of a medal.

Wooden Walls, when Athens was in imminent danger from the Persians, B. C. 483, during the invasion of Xerxes, the oracle at Delphi was consulted, and, intimating that the city and country were doomed to ruin, added that when all was lost, a wooden wall should still shelter her citizens. The Athenian young men interpreted "a wooden wall" to signify ships; Themistocles, who had probably influenced the oracle to utter the prediction or counsel it had given, was of the same opinion; faith was put in the navy, and the result was the great victory of Salamis. It was from this incident that the expression, "The wooden walls of England," arose.

Worse than a Crime. It was worse than a crime, it was a blunder. Said by Talleyrand of the murder of the Duc d'Enghien by Napoleon I.

Wyoming Massacre, the massacre of the inhabitants of Wyoming Valley, Lucerne Co., Pa., following a battle of Tory and Indian invaders, on one side, and the American settlers on the other, July 3, 1778.

Xerxes's Tears, it is said that when Xerxes, King of Persia, reviewed his magnificent and enormous army before starting for Greece, he wept at the thought of slaughter about to take place. "Of all this multitude, who shall say how many will return?" Emerson, in his English Traits, chap. iv., speaks of the Emperor Charlemagne viewing the fleet of the Norsemen in the Mediterranean Sea with tears in his eyes, and adds, "There was reason for these Xerxes's tears." Xerxes wept at the prospective loss he expected to suffer in the invasion prepared, but Charlemagne wept at the prospective disruption of his kingdom by the hardy Norsemen.

X-Rays, discovered by William Conrad Roentgen, Professor of Physics at the Royal University of Würzburg, in Germany, toward the close of the year 1895.

Yellow Journal, a sensational journal or newspaper. Sensational literature was formerly bound in yellow paper covers, hence the name "yellow journal."

Zend Avesta, the sacred book of the Parsees. The original is written in the primitive Zend language. In antiquity, the work ranks second to the Vedas.

An Alphabetical Collection of Over Nine Hundred Adages, Aphorisms, and Sayings, Compiled from All Languages, Constituting the Crystallized Wit and Wisdom of All Times and Countries. All foreign maxims and sayings are translated into English.

Maxims and proverbs are pithy popular sayings drawn from long experience, concisely expressing some general principle, rule of action, established truth, or moral lesson. They have been aptly defined as "the wisdom of the many expressed by the wit of the few."

The ablest writers and orators of every age have drawn freely upon them to enforce an argument, "point a moral, or adorn a tale."

Being the offspring of the wit and wisdom of many generations of the common people, they appeal to the natural common sense of the masses, and a maxim of a single sentence often serves better to illustrate a speaker's position and enforce his argument than an hour and a half of eloquent discourse.

No writer or public speaker can glance over this collection of Maxims and Proverbs without finding on every page fresh food for thought and new inspiration for his pen or tongue.

A bad beginning has a bad ending.
 A bad penny always comes back.
 A bald head is soon shaved.
 A barking dog seldom bites.
 A bargain's a bargain.
 A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.
 A biting dog wears a torn skin.

 Great barkers are no biters.
 Great cry and little wool.
 Great fishes break the net.
 Great fleas have little fleas upon their backs, to bite 'em.
 Great talkers are commonly liars.
 Great thieves hang little ones.
 Grief that is cherished unseen must be genuine.
 Habit if not resisted soon becomes necessity.
 Habit is a second nature.
 Half a loaf is better than no bread.
 Handsome is that handsome does.
 Happiness has many friends.
 Happy is he who has one eye, where all others are blind.
 Haste makes waste.
 Hasten slowly.
 Have a place for everything, and everything in its place.
 Hear the other side of the question.
 Heaven helps those who help themselves.
 He does an injury to the good, who spares the bad.
 He doubles the obligation who gives with readiness.
 He gives twice that gives in a trice.
 He hath need of a long spoon that sups with the devil.
 He is a good orator who convinces himself.
 He is doubly a conqueror, who when a conqueror, can conquer himself.
 He is indeed a conqueror who overcomes himself.
 He is most powerful who can govern himself.
 He is the freeman whom the truth makes free.
 He labors in vain who aims at pleasing everybody.
 He laughs best who laughs last.
 Hell and chancery are always open.
 Hell is paved with good intentions.
 He makes no friend who never made a foe.
 He must rise betimes, that would please everybody.
 He receives many favors who knows how to return them.
 He that by the plow would thrive, must either hold, himself, or drive.
 He that does you an ill turn will never forgive you.
 He that fights and runs away may live to fight another day.
 He that goes a borrowing goes a sorrowing.
 He that seeks trouble, it were a pity he should miss it.

He that hath friends must show himself friendly.
 He that shows his passion, tells his enemy where to hit him.
 He that swells in prosperity will shrink in adversity.
 He that waits for dead men's shoes may long go barefoot.
 He that was born to be hanged will never be drowned.
 He who asks with timidity, prepares for himself a denial.
 He who avoids the temptation, escapes the sin.
 He who builds on the promises of others, is but too often deceived.
 He who covets the property of another, deservedly loses his own.

 He who reckons without his host must reckon again.
 He who serves well need not be afraid to ask his wages.
 He who sows brambles must not go barefoot.
 He who teaches learns.
 He who tells you the faults of others, intends to tell others your faults.
 Hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may.
 His praise is lost who waits till all commend.
 Honesty is praised and starves.
 Honesty is the best policy.
 Hope deferred maketh the heart sick.
 Hope for the best, but provide for the worst.
 Hope is the last thing we lose.
 Hunger drives the wolf out of the wood.
 Hunger finds no bread bad.
 Hunger teaches many things.
 Husband thy resources.
 Hypocrisy is a homage rendered by vice to virtue.
 Idle folk take the most pains.
 Idleness is the hotbed of vice and ignorance.
 I can see as far through a millstone as another man.
 If God is for us, who shall be against us?
 If it were not for hope the heart would break.
 If the counsel be good, no matter who gave it.
 If the mountain will not come to Mahomet, Mahomet must go to the mountain.
 If the sky falls we shall catch larks.
 If to-day will not, to-morrow may.
 If wishes were horses, beggars would ride.
 If you cannot bite, never show your teeth.
 If you lie upon roses when you are young, you will lie upon thorns when you are old.
 If you swear, you'll catch no fish.

If you would preserve peace, always appear prepared for war.
 Imitation is the sincerest flattery.
 Impudence and wit are vastly different.
 Incessant labor conquers all things.
 In for a penny, in for a pound.
 In prosperity prepare for a change, in adversity hope for one.
 In the midst of arms the laws are silent.
 It is a fraud to conceal a fraud.
 It is an ill cause that none dare speak in.
 It is a long lane that has no turning.
 It is an ill wind that blows nobody good.
 It is a silly fish that is caught twice with the same bait.
 It is better to be alone than in bad company.
 It is darkest just before dawn.
 It is easier to be wise for others, than for ourselves.
 It is easy for those who are well to give advice
 to the sick.
 It is equally wrong to confide in all, or in none.
 It is good to have two strings to one's bow.
 It is good to sleep in a whole skin.
 It is hard for an empty bag to stand upright.
 It is hard to teach an old dog new tricks.
 It is ill jesting with edged tools.
 It is never too late to learn.
 It is never too late to mend.
 It is not permitted to know all things.
 It is not the big oxen that do the best day's work.
 It is past joking when the head's off.
 It is sometimes expedient to forget what we know.
 It is sweet to die for one's country.
 It is the crime, not the punishment, that constitutes the shame.
 It is the height of art to conceal art.
 It is the nature of man to love novelty.
 It is too late to complain when a thing is done.
 It is too late to lock the stable door when the steed is stolen.
 It is wise to derive knowledge even from an enemy.
 It never rains but it pours.
 It takes two to make a bargain.
 It takes two to make a quarrel.
 Jack of all trades, master of none.
 Jacob's voice, Esau's hands.
 Jest with your equals.
 Judge not of a ship as she lies on the stocks.
 Judge not others by yourself.
 Keep a thing seven years and you will find use for it.
 Keep no more cats than will catch mice.
 Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life.
 Keep the wolf from the door.
 Keep thy shop, and thy shop will keep thee.
 Keep your nose out of another's mess.
 Keep your breath to cool your own porridge.
 Kill two birds with one stone.
 Kings have long hands.
 Knowledge is power.
 Knowledge is treasure, and memory is the treasury.
 Know thyself.

Know your opportunity.
 Laugh, and the world laughs with you; weep,
 and you weep alone.
 Laughter is not always proof of a mind at ease.
 Laws were made for rogues.
 Lawyers' houses are built on the heads of fools.
 Learn to creep before you run.
 Least said the soonest mended.
 Let compulsion be used when necessary, but deception never.
 Let him who has won it wear the palm.
 Let him who stands look well lest he fall.
 Let justice be done though the heavens fall.
 Let nothing but what is good be spoken of the dead.
 Let not the sun go down on your wrath.
 Let not your right hand know what your left hand doeth.
 Let the dead past bury its dead.
 Let the cobbler stick to his last.
 Let them laugh that win.
 Liars should have good memories.
 Light gains make heavy purses.
 Lightning never strikes twice in the same place.
 Like angels' visits, few and far between.
 Like father, like son.
 Like master, like man.
 Listeners hear no good of themselves.
 Listen to the voice of experience.
 Little and often fill the purse.
 Little boats should keep near shore; greater ones may venture more.
 Little pitchers have great ears.
 Little pots soon boil over.
 Little property, little care.
 Little strokes fell great oaks.

 Look before you leap.
 Look not a gift horse in the mouth.
 Look to the end.
 Look to the main chance.
 Losers are always in the wrong.
 Love and smoke cannot be concealed.
 Love begets love.
 Love can neither be bought nor sold.
 Love is blind.
 Love me little, love me long.
 Love me, love my dog.
 Lying pays no tax.
 Maidens say no and mean yes.
 Make a virtue of necessity.
 Make hay while the sun shines.
 Make the best of a bad bargain.
 Make yourself all honey and the flies will devour you.
 Man is blind to his own faults, but clear-sighted
 in discerning those of others.
 Man is to man a wolf.
 Man may deserve success, but only God can command it.
 Man proposes, God disposes.
 Man wants but little, nor that little long.
 Many a dog howls before he is hurt.
 Many a one digs his grave with his teeth.
 Many go out for wool and come home shorn.

Many hands make light work.
 Many men, many minds.
 Marry in haste, repent at leisure.
 Marry your son when you please, your daughter when you can.
 Matches are made in heaven.
 Mind moves matter.
 Misfortunes never come singly.
 Might makes right.
 Misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows.
 Moderate profits fill the purse.
 Moderation is best.
 Money begets money.
 Money forms the sinews of war.
 Money is the master-key to every lock.
 Money makes the mare go.
 More die of surfeit than of hunger.
 Murder will out.
 Much would have more and lost all.
 Necessity is a powerful engine.
 Necessity is the mother of invention.
 Never despair.
 Never leave that till to-morrow which you can do to-day.
 Never limp before the lame.
 Never ride a willing horse to death.
 Never send a boy to mill.
 Never speak ill of your neighbors.
 Never speak unless you have something to say.
 Never spend your money before you get it.
 Never too old to learn.
 Nine tailors make a man.
 No creature smarts so little as a fool.
 No deity is propitious to the idle.
 No good man becomes suddenly rich.
 No great loss but some small gain.
 No legacy so rich as honesty.
 No man is a competent judge of his own conduct.
 No man is at all times wise.
 No man is fit to command who has not learned to obey.
 None but the brave deserve the fair.
 None of you knows where the shoe pinches.
 None so blind as those who won't see.
 None so deaf as those who won't hear.
 No news is good news.
 No one ever cries stinking fish.
 No one is perfectly satisfied with his lot.
 No rogue e'er felt the halter draw with good opinion of the law.
 No rose without a thorn.
 No smoke without some fire.
 Nothing comes amiss.
 Nothing dries sooner than tears.
 Nothing is had for nothing.
 Nothing is lost in a good market.
 Nothing is law that is not reason.
 Nothing succeeds like success.
 Nothing venture, nothing gain.
 Not the pain, but the cause, makes the martyr.
 Of two evils choose the lesser.
 Oil and truth will get uppermost at last.
 Old age bends the knee.
 Old birds are not caught with chaff.
 Old foxes are hard to catch.

Old wood to burn! Old wine to drink! Old friends to trust! Old authors to read!
 Once a knave, always a knave.
 One bad example spoils many good precepts.
 One beats the bush, another catches the bird.
 One fool makes many.
 One good turn deserves another.
 One half the world knows not how the other half lives.
 One man's meat is another man's poison.
 One man sows, another reaps.
 One may be a wise man, and yet not know how to make a watch.
 One may smile and smile, and be a villain.
 One must yield to the times.
 One nail drives out another.
 One swallow doesn't make a summer.
 One tale is good until another is told.
 One touch of nature makes the whole world kin.
 One ungrateful man does an injury to all who stand in need of aid.
 Open confession is good for the soul.
 Opportunity must be seized by the forelock; behind she is bald.
 Opportunity makes the thief.
 Our neighbor's children are always the worst.
 Out of debt, out of danger.
 Out of sight, out of mind.
 Out of the frying-pan, into the fire.
 Pardon others frequently, yourself never.
 Patience is a plaster for all sores.
 Patience is bitter, but it yields sweet fruit.
 Penny wise, pound foolish.
 People like to be humbugged.
 Perjury is a virtue, when the oath was a crime.
 Plow, or not plow, you must pay your rent.
 Poets are born, not made.
 Poor men's tables are soon spread.
 Possession is nine points of the law.
 Posthumous glory comes too late.
 Poverty is no crime.
 Poverty wants many things, avarice everything.
 Practice makes perfect.
 Praise the sea, but keep on land.
 Praise undeserved is scandal in disguise.
 Precept begins, example perfects.
 Precept must be upon precept.
 Press not a falling man too far.
 Prevention is better than cure.
 Principles, not men.
 Procrastination is the thief of time.
 Promises don't fill the belly.
 Prosperity attracts friends, adversity proves them.
 Prove all things: hold fast to that which is good.
 Proverbs existed before books.
 Public good must be preferred to private advantage.
 Put not all your eggs in one basket.
 Put the light out, and all women look alike.
 Quarrels would not last so long, if the fault lay all on one side.
 Quick at meat, quick at work.
 Quick come, quick go.
 Ragged colts may make fine horses.
 Rather lose the wool than the sheep.

Raw leather will stretch.
 Reform yourself first, then others.
 Religion is an excellent armor, but a bad cloak.
 Religious contention is Satan's harvest.
 Report hangs a man.
 Resist the devil, and he will flee from you.
 Resist the first beginnings.
 Revenge a wrong by forgiving it.
 Revenge is sweet.
 Riches have wings.
 Riches rule the roost.
 Rich men have no faults.
 Riches make the man.
 Rome was not built in a day.
 Salt spilled is never all gathered.
 Sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.
 Save a rogue from the gallows and he'll cut your throat.
 Savory sauces stimulate the appetite.
 Saving is getting.
 Saw wood and say nothing.
 Say-well is good; but do-well is better.
 Seeing is believing.
 See Naples and die.
 Seldom seen, soon forgotten.
 Self-love is the greatest of flatterers.
 Set a beggar on horseback, and he'll ride to the devil.
 Set a thief to catch a thief.
 Silence gives consent.
 Singed cats live long.
 Six feet of earth makes all men equal.
 Slow, but sure.
 Small cheer and great welcome make a merry feast.
 Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep.
 Some are wise and some are otherwise.
 Sooner said than done.
 Sorrow treads upon the heels of joy.
 Sour grapes, said the fox when he could not reach them.
 Spare the rod and spoil the child.
 Speak of the devil and he will appear.
 Speak only good of the dead.
 Speak softly and carry a big stick; you will go far.
 Speak the truth and shame the devil.
 Speech is silver, silence is gold.
 Step by step one accomplishes a long journey.
 Stick to the truth.
 Still waters run deep.
 Stolen waters are sweet.
 Straws show which way the wind blows.
 Strike while the iron is hot.
 Sue a beggar and get a louse.
 Suspicion always haunts a guilty mind.
 Sweet are the uses of adversity.
 Take a hair of the dog to cure his bite.
 Take care of the dimes, and the dollars will take care of themselves.
 Take everything as it comes and make the best of it.
 Take the will for the deed.
 Take time by the forelock.
 Tell me what company you keep, and I will tell you who you are.

Tell no tales out of school.
 That must be true which all men say.
 That you may be loved, be amiable.
 The abuse of money is worse than the want of it.
 The accomplice is as bad as the thief.
 The beaten path is the safest.
 The best prophet of the future is the past.
 The better the day, the better the deed.
 The borrower is servant to the lender.
 The boy is father of the man.
 The cause is concealed, the effect is notorious.
 The circuitous road is often preferable to the direct one.
 The countenance is the index of the mind.
 The course of true love never did run smooth.
 The credit that is got by a lie only lasts till the truth comes out.
 The crow thinks her own birds the whitest.
 The difference is great between words and deeds.
 The eagle does not catch flies.
 The early bird catches the worm.
 The end must justify the means.
 The error of an hour may become the sorrow of a whole life.
 The exception proves the existence of the rule.
 The extreme point of right is often a great injustice.
 The fates lead those who are willing, and drag along those who are not.
 The fox may grow gray, but never good.
 The full cask makes no noise.
 The giver makes the gift precious.
 The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world.
 The idle man's head is the devil's workshop.
 The kettle calls the pot black.
 The king can do no wrong.
 The last feather breaks the camel's back.
 The longest day must have an end.
 The longest pole knocks the persimmons.
 The longest way about is the shortest way home.
 The love of money is the root of all evil.
 The man, as well as the boy, often pays too much for his whistle.
 The middle of the course is best.
 The more haste the less speed.
 The more foolish, the more insolent.
 The perfection of art is to conceal art.
 The pitcher may go often to the well, and be broken at last.
 The poor man pays for all.
 The present moment is for those who enjoy, the future for those who suffer.
 The promise of a good man is his bond.
 The proof of the pudding is in the eating.
 The quarrels of lovers bring about a renewal of love.
 The raven doth not hatch a lark.
 There are more threatened than struck.
 There are two sides to every story.
 The receiver is as bad as the thief.
 The remedy is worse than the disease.
 There is a cure for everything but death.
 There is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow.

There is a time for everything.
 There is a salve for every sore.
 There's many a slip 'twixt cup and lip.
 There is no day without the night.
 There is no disputing on points of taste.
 There is no general rule without exceptions.
 There's no fool like the old fool.
 There is no love without jealousy.
 There is no man great before his valet.
 There is no medicine against death.
 There is nothing certain but death.
 There is nothing new under the sun.
 There's no royal road to knowledge.
 There's no use crying over spilled milk.
 The sweetest grapes hang highest.
 The thirteenth man brings death.
 The voice of the people is the voice of God.
 The weakest goes to the wall.
 The wicked flee when no man pursueth.
 The wind keeps not always in one quarter.
 The wise man thinks he knows but little, the fool thinks he knows everything.
 The wish is father to the thought.
 The world moves.
 The worth of a thing is what it will bring.
 The young cock crows as he heard the old one.
 The young may die, the old must die.
 They-say-so is a half lie.
 They that hide can find.
 They that live in glass houses should not throw stones.
 Those whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad.
 Though the mills of the gods grind slowly,
 yet they grind exceeding small.
 Though the wound is healed, a scar remains.
 Though we love the treason, we hate the traitor.
 Three removes are as bad as one fire.
 Thrice is he armed who hath his quarrel just.
 Time and tide wait for no man.
 Time discloses all things.
 'Tis a wise child that knows its own father.
 'Tis better to be happy than wise.
 'Tis wisdom's part sometimes to play the fool.
 To err is human, to forgive, divine.
 Too many cooks spoil the broth.
 Tread on a worm and it will turn.
 Troops of heroes undistinguished die.
 Truth, by whomsoever spoken, comes from God.
 Truth crushed to earth will rise again.
 Truth is mighty, and will prevail.
 Truth is stranger than fiction.
 Truth lies at the bottom of a well.
 Two of a trade never agree.
 Two's company, three's a crowd.
 Two wrongs don't make a right.
 Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.
 Union is strength.
 Unwilling service earns no thanks.
 Usage has the force of law.
 Use soft words and hard arguments.
 Variety is the spice of life.
 Venture a small fish to catch a large one.
 Venture not all in one bottom.
 Vinegar never catches flies.
 Virtue is its own reward.
 Virtue is the only true nobility.

Vows made in storms are forgotten in calms.
 Wade not in unknown waters.
 Wait is a hard word to the hungry.
 Walls have ears.
 Want is the mother of industry.
 War should be waged as if its only object was the attainment of a secure peace.
 Waste makes want.
 Waste not, want not.
 Wealth ill acquired flies away.
 Weeds want no sowing.
 Weigh well the end.
 Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest.
 Well begun is half done.
 We shall see, as the blind man said.
 What can't be cured must be endured.
 Whatever is is right.
 What is begun in strife is difficult to be ended.
 Whatever will be will be.
 What is one man's meat is another man's poison.
 What one ardently desires, he easily believes.
 What three know, everybody knows.
 What you do yourself is well done.
 When flatterers meet, the devil goes to dinner.
 When Greek meets Greek, then comes the tug of war.
 When one will not, two cannot quarrel.
 When rogues fall out honest men get their dues.
 When the cat's away the mice will play.
 When the wine is in, the wit is out.
 Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise.
 Where law ends, tyranny begins.
 Where the carcass is, there will be the eagles gathered together.
 Where there's a will, there's a way.
 Where the treasure is, there will the heart be also.
 While there is life there is hope.
 Who cares not for his own life is master of another man's.
 Who drives fat oxen should himself be fat.
 Who has nothing fears nothing.
 Whom the cap fits, let him wear it.
 Whom the gods love die young.
 Without pains there can be no gains.
 Without sweat and labor no work is perfected.
 Wise men change their minds; fools never.
 Wit may be bought too dear.
 With foxes we must play the fox.
 Workers of evil prefer darkness to light.
 Worth makes the man, the want of it the fellow.
 Wrongly gotten, wrongly spent.
 You cannot catch old birds with chaff.
 You cannot make a silk purse of a sow's ear.
 You can't get blood from a turnip.
 You can't eat your cake and have it too.
 You must shift your sails with the winds.
 You must take the fat with the lean.
 Young folks think old folks are fools, old folks know young folks are.
 Your cause being lost it is useless to speak of it.
 Youth indulges in hope, old age in remembrance.
 Youth will have its swing.
 You will go most safely in the middle of the road.
 Your if is the only peacemaker; much virtue in if.

A well understood symbolism has become attached to most flowers, so that by giving a little attention to the following vocabulary of their language, a cluster of flowers may be made to express even the nicest shades of sentiment. If a flower is offered reversed, its direct significance is likewise reversed, and its opposite implied. Thus, for example, the white rose held upright denotes "I am worthy of you," but when reversed, it means "I am not worthy of you."

jury when it is of opinion an offender should be held to trial.

trust. Right of property, real or personal, held by one person for the benefit of another.

trustee. Person in whom some interest or power in or affecting property is vested for the benefit of another.

ultra vires. Applied to acts of corporations beyond the scope of their charter powers.

under-lease. A lease granted by one who is himself only a lessee of the premises underlet.

under-lessee. The person to whom an under-lease is granted.

unliquidated damages. Damages not fixed or ascertained, and which require therefore to be estimated by a jury.

use. A right to the beneficial enjoyment of land nominally vested in another.

usury. The extortion of unlawful gain; the taking more for the use of money than is allowed by law.

value received. The words usually appearing in bills of exchange and promissory notes to indicate that the note has been made or the bill accepted for a valuable consideration.

venditioni exponas. A writ directed to the sheriff, commanding him to sell goods which he has taken possession of under a writ of fieri facias, and which remain in his hands unsold.

vendor's lien. Lien allowed to a vendor for unpaid purchase money, where the deed expresses, contrary to the fact, that the money has been paid.

venire facias juratores. Usually called venire simply. Writ issued to summon citizens to act as jurors.

venue. Place at which facts are alleged to have occurred.

verdict. Unanimous decision of a jury on some matter submitted to them in the trial of a cause.

versus. Against. Usually abbreviated vs.

vis major. Superior force. In law it signifies inevitable accident; the act of God.

voidable. Having some force, but capable of being adjudged void.

voir dire. Preliminary examination of a witness to ascertain his competency.

voluntary conveyance. Transfer of an estate without adequate consideration.

voucher. A book, receipt, entry or other document which establishes the truth of accounts.

waiver. The act of waiving; of not insisting on some right, claim or privilege.

ward. An infant under the guidance and protection of a guardian.

ward of court. An infant with reference to whose property a suit has been instituted in chancery. A ward ought not to marry without leave of the court. Any person marrying a ward without such leave is guilty of a contempt of court, and can be punished by imprisonment.

warrant. An authority or precept from a justice, commanding the apprehension of an offender, or a search to be made for stolen goods.

warrant of attorney. An authority given by any one to an attorney-at-law, to appear and plead for him; or to suffer judgment to pass against him, by confessing the action.

warranty. As applied to goods and chattels, may be either expressed or implied; the implied warranty only extends to the title of the vendor. If that proves deficient, the purchaser may demand satisfaction from the seller.

warranty deed. Deed containing personal covenants of the grantor to indemnify the grantee in case the title should fail.

waste. Spoil or destruction, done or permitted, to lands, houses or other form of corporeal property, to the prejudice of the heir or person owning some future estate.

will. A legal statement of the disposition a person wishes to have made of his property after his death. The person making the will, if a man, is called a testator; if a woman, a testatrix.

DICTIONARY OF BIBLICAL NAMES

N. B.—The accent placed after a vowel denotes the long sound, after a consonant the short sound. In long diphthongs the accent is placed after the vowel which determines the sound. Ch should be sounded like k, as Kel'lus for Chel'lus, Akil'ophel for Achit'ophel, &c., except in Ra'chel and Cher'ubim. G is hard before e, i, and y, as in Gerizim, Gideon; except in the name Bethphage.

DICTIONARY OF GREEK AND LATIN PROPER NAMES

N. B.—In the pronunciation of Greek and Latin words c and g are always hard before a, o, and u, and soft before e, i, and y. Ch before a vowel is pronounced like k, as in Charybdis. E final, both with and without the preceding consonant, always forms a distinct syllable, as in Penelope, Evoc. Every final i, whether accented or not, has the long sound. The diphthongs æ and œ ending an accented syllable are pronounced like long e, as in Cæsar. The vowels ei are generally pronounced like long i. The e in the termination es is long and the s has the sound of z, as in Demosthenes.

Typography, or the art of printing from movable types on paper, vellum, etc., was ⁱⁿvented about the middle of the fifteenth century in ^{the name/}mainz, Germany, by a patrician of that city named Johannes ⁺Gensfleisch, meaning literally John Gooseflesh, but known to fame as John Gutenberg. [□]The word [#]typography is of ^{l.c.}greek derivation, and means literally writing by types. The art is quite distinct, however from writing, and even more so from ^{1/ital.}XYLOGRAPHY ^{2/}[wood-writing] or wood-engraving ^{3/}i. e., the art of cutting figures, letters or ^{no #}words on blocks of ^{such/}blocks of wood and taking impressions from such block ^{tr.}by means of ink ^{w.f./c}or other fluid colored substances.

Both block-printing and printing with movable types seem to have been practiced in China, Japan and Korea long before they were known in Europe, but from evidence as we have, certain seems it that Europe is not indebted for either art to the Orient. STEREOTYPING and Electrotyping, the two principal methods of reproducing and multiplying letter-press printing surfaces by taking casts of them, have greatly conduced to the progress of Typography.

Proofreading, or correcting for the press, is considered one of the most important functions in a first-class printing-office. This page, prepared by an expert proofreader, shows all the signs and abbreviations used in marking errors, and its careful study will repay any one called upon at any time to prepare "copy" for the printer or to "O. K." a proof-sheet.

which was prepared especially for this book

- Dele = expunge, or take out.
- Turn an inverted letter or line.
- Insert space, or more space.
- Take out space, or print as single character or diphthong, as ae (æ), ffi (ffi).
- Carry to the left.
- Carry to the right.
- Indent one em, or insert em space.

- Raise.
- Lower or sink.
- Straighten a crooked line.
- Calls attention to a space or quadrat improperly appearing.
- Calls attention to broken type.
- Make a new paragraph.
- Period.

- Colon.

- Ld. Lead, or space between the lines.
- Sol. Solid, or remove space between the lines.
- w. f. Wrong font.

- tr. Transpose.
- l. c. Lower case, (i. e. small letters).
- s. c. Small capitals.
- ital. Italics.

- caps. Capitals. [type].
- Rom. Roman (i. e., ordinary)
- Qy? Query (Is this right?)
- Out—s. c. Insert words omitted—see copy.

UNDERSCORING.—One line, italics; two lines, small capitals; three lines, capitals. A waved line under a word indicates that it is to be set in boldfaced type. A series of dots with the word stet (let it stand) written in the margin, indicates that the words erased and under which these dots are placed are to be restored or retained. A vertical line drawn through a capital letter in "copy" indicates that it should be a small letter. A line drawn around a figure or number or an abbreviated word in "copy" indicates that it should be spelled out in full.
